Voting in Bavaria and Hesse Provides a Test for Schmidt

BONN, Oct. 25 (Renters), -Chancellor Helmut Schmidt faces his first major test of public sentiment on Sunday when onequarter of the nation's voters go to the polls in two state elections.

The 11 million voters electing new parliaments in Bavaria and Hesse are expected to provide an indication of the standing of Mr. Schmidt and his cabinet since he took over from Willy Brandt In May following the Guillaume espionage affair.

The two elections also involve nine seats in the 41-seat Bundesrat (upper house), which is made up of parliamentarians from the Federal Republic's 10 states.

At present, the conservation Christian Democratic Union (CDU) and its Bayarian wing, the Christian Social Union (CSU) control the Bundearat by a single seat. This enables them to block or delay bills pushed through the Bundestag (lower house) by the left-liberal coalition.

The Bayarian parliament is controlled by CSU members, allowing them to occupy the state's five Bundesrat seats in Bonn

Red Hesse

Hesse, with its smaller population, is entitled to four seats in the upper house and they are occupied by Mr. Schmidt's Social Democratic party. This has been the case in the heavily industrialized state since World War II, giving it the nickname of "Red Opinion polls favor the Social Democrats to hold on-probably with the help of their junior coalition partners, the F-se Democrats.

Kissinger,

Brezhnev

MOSCOW, Oct. 25 (NYT).— Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Leonid Brexhnev, the Soviet Communist party leader, met for more than five hours today and talked almost exclusively about the key problem of putting further curbs on each side's arsenal of offensive strategic weapons.

A brief communiqué issued at the close of tonight's session said exchange of views as "useful" and would continue discussions tomorrow, Mr. Kissinger's final day in the Soviet capital. He leaves for New Delhi early Sunday morning, on the second leg of his three-week trip to more than a dozen countries.

Officials of both countries declined to go into details about today's discussions, which lasted two hours and 45 minutes in the morning and 2 1/2 hours tonight, The officials limited themselves to saying that Mr. Kissinger, Mr. Brezhuev and their aides *gave detailed consideration to matters related to possible further measures on the further limitation of strategic arms."

A U.S. spokesman said that the atmosphere was "very friend-ly and very cordial," to keeping with the tone of yesterday's first day of talks, which were devoted primarily to issues other than strategic arms limitation,

Little Light Shed The noncommittal nature of the joint statement shed little light on whether Mr. Kissinger had made much progress with the "fairly concrete ideas" he had

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (WP). -Scheduled airlines flying the North Atlantic have unexpectedly balked at putting into effect an average 10-per-cent fare increase on Nov. 1, although they proposed the higher fares in the first

The airlines feared that, if they implement the increases approved this week by the Civil Aeronautics Board, they would give too great an advantage to the charter carriers with which they compete. The airlines said that the new minimum charter rates as compared with the new scheduled rates are too low.

The reports from the scheduled airlines, meeting in Geneva in an executive session of the International Air Transport Association, occurred as the CAB orged

Many: passengers adready have bought tickets for flights after Oct. 31 at the higher fares. If the increases do not go into effect, the difference will have to be refunded.

The increases range from 3.6 per cent to 19 per cent, depending on the fare.

Sources close to the IATA neotiations believed that the most likely outcome would be for the scheduled airlines to go ahead with the increases, let them run through the winter when charter competition is not significant. and negotiate new fares before next April when the European travel season begins.

But other choices under consideration by the IATA, the scheduled airlines' rate-fixing organization, included.

• Informing governments there is no fare agreement. Differential Figure

The last would be the most extreme choice and would lead to a so-called "open-rate" situation. Each airline would be free to set its own fares, subject to approval of governments. Some said this could produce a rate war with the airlines competing in ticket prices. Others said the scheouled airlines would tend to keep fares where they were.

The airlines had been negotiating under the assumption that the round-trip differential between the lowest available scheduled fare and the lowest charter ed today.

The CAB issued charter rate guidelines which took into account not only seasonal factors but also the size of an airplane. Under the guidelines, the charter fare difference on a plane with more than 230 seats (the kind most frequently flown by charter airlines) would be $140 less than the lowest comparable scheduled fare. Callaghan Questions Benefit Of British-S. Africa Navy Pact

CARDIFF. Wales, Oct. 25 (Reu-ters).—British Foreign Secretary James Callaghan said tonight that a naval defense pact with South Africa should be allowed to lapse if the political embarrassment to Britain outweighs the military value.

In a speech here, he accused the Pretoria government of manipulating and misrepresenting a just-concluded visit by 11 British Navy warships to Cape Town in order to try to indicate British support for the segrega-tionist republic while it is under attack at the United Nations.

Mr. Callaghan said that the Labor government, returned to power earlier this month, would "Icok again at the value of the Simonstown agreement."

If it is important to British security to maintain the pact, then it must be continued, he said, adding that the political emparrassment it causes Britain throughout the world must also be weighed by ministers.

A Question of Equality

If there is no equality be-tween the political damage and military usefulness of the pact, then it should be brought to end or allowed to wither on the vine, Mr. Callaghan said. The foreign secretary also an-nounced that Britain would not support the current move to expel South Africa from the UN, although he said this did not lessen British opposition to the apartheid policies of the Pretoria govern-

Britain believes all nations should be represented at the UN whatever their policies, and it opposes the idea of expelling any nation because its policies are detestable or unpalatable, he said.

Arab Aides Rebuff King On West Bank

(Continued from Page 1) undercut his political opposition today, saying its efforts to force Israeli retention of the occupied West Bank of the Jordan would, if successful, end all prospects for Middle East peace and plunge the region into war.

In a national television interview, Mr. Rabin said he was confident that the move by the Likud opposition bloc would fail before the issue of the West Bank comes up as a formal resolution in the Knesset (parliament).

The Likud bas been circulating a petition calling on the Knesset to take action to insure that the West Bank be kept under Israeli rule. Likud leaders say they have collected more than 300,000 signatures on the

Mr. Rabin said the petition had "grave significance" because "it will result in the world condemning us and saying, The State of Israel is closing down the way to peace." In a speech at the northern coastal city of Haifa, Maj. Gen. Ariel Sharon, retired, a leader of the Likud bloc, said he was skeptical of the Arabs' intentions to make peace with Israel and for this reason Israel should not give up any part of the West Bank or the Golan Heights on the Syrian frontier. Gen. Sharon, commander of the Israeli ermored force that crossed the Suez Canal into Egypt in last year's war, said Israel could make further territorial concessions to the Egyptians in the Sinai Desert, but that even there the Jewish state had to keep the oil fields at Abu Rbodels, and Sharm el-Sheikh, et the strategic southern tip of

The pact gives the British Navy its only base between Gibraltar and Singapore and allows frequent joint exercises between South Africa and passing British warships. Navy chiefs value the agreement because of the Soviet buildup in the Indian Ocean. The latest visit was authorized

U.K. Government Will Pay for Thalidomide Tax

LONDON, Oct. 25 (AP).-The government announced today that it will pay the equivalent of £5 million ($12 million) to a trust fund for thalidomide children to offset taxes on payments from the fund.

The government decision was aimed at defusing a nationwide furor that ensued after families of the deformed children learned that they would be taxed on payments from the fund, set up in 1973 by the Distillers Co.

The giant whisky and chemical manufacturer, which marketed the drug in Britain, agreed to pay the parents of 433 British thalidomide children annual compensation totaling about £2 million for seven years. in a report yesterday.
East Orange and Camden,
N.J. were listed among the least segregated cities, but Newark, N.J., was among those showing a strong increase in segregation during the 1960s. The council said its ratings were derived from the 1970 census. The tabulations were prepared under the direction of Prof. Karl Taeuber of the University of Wisconsin.

With respect to blacks, Indians and Asians, the council said 97.4 per cent of the nonwhites in Shreveport would have to change their places of residence to make that city's housing pattern random with respect to race. The next most segregated were Winston-Salem, N. C.; Augusta, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Charlotte, N.C., and Dallas, it said.

Least Segregated

By comparison, in Cambridge, Mass., a university town, 52.6 per cent of nonwhites would have to move to make a random distribution. Following Cambridge on the list of least segregated cities were San Francisco and Sacramento, Calif.; East Orange, N.J., and Berkeley, Calif.

The council defined "random distribution" as providing the sures the quality same percentage of nonwhites in life and services.

Surveying blacks alone, 97.8 per cent of Shreveport's blacks would have to move within the city to achieve random distri-bution. Next highest black segregation was in Dallas, followed by Oklahoma City, Fort Worth, Texas, and Winston-Salem, the council said. By comparison, to achieve ran-dom distribution in East Orange would require that 61.4 per cent of its blacks move. Next best in this category were Cambridge, Camden, Oakland, Calif., and Wilmington, Del., the council

The greatest trend toward desegregation in the decade of the 1960s was found in East St. Louis. Ill, where segregation declined 15.2 per cent, the council said. Following East St. Louis in the percentages were San Francisco. Cambridge Flint, Mich. and Minneapolis.

Cities that showed an increase in segregation during the decade were Charleston, S.C. up 7 per cent, followed by Macon, Ga. Mount Vernon, N.Y.; Detroit and Newark.

Jerry Ray said in court that author William Bradford Huie did not want his brother to testify in:a trial because it would destroy the value of a book which Mr. Hule was writing about Ray and the King slaying, called, "He Slew a Dreamer."

The charge was made during the fourth day of e U.S. District Court hearing on Ray's efforts to change his plea in the King slaying so he can stand trial for murder in the case.

Jerry Ray said that he talked with Mr. Hule in December, 1968, in Huntsville, Ala., and that the author reported that the defense lawyer at the time, Arthur Hanes sr, was having trouble because James "wanted to get on the witness stand," Jerry Ray said that Mr. Huie suggested that he tell his brother that the author did not want him on the stand and would give him [James] $12,000. The witness said that he later told his brother that he should get another lawyer, suggesting Percy Foreman, because "you don't have an ettorney representing you. He's representing a book writer"

James Earl Ray contends that he was pressured into the guilty plea by Mr. Foreman. He contends that Mr. Hanes and Mr. Foreman had a conflict of interest because they had contracted with Mr. Huie for royalties on his book. The royalties purportedly were to cover the fees of Ray's attorneys. Another of Ray's brothers, John Larry Ray, who is serving an 18year sentence for bank robbery, testified yesterday that Mr. Foreman asked Ray's family to put sure on him to plead guilty

Mr. MacDonnell said that in his opinion there was a large enough fragment of the bullet recovered from Dr. King's body to determine definitely if it was fired from the rifle brought to Memphis by James Earl Ray the day before Dr. King was killed. The defense has not been allowed access to the rifle for the

Concerning Days After Break-In

Dean Accused of False Testimony

-The lawyer for Watergate cover-up trial defendant Robert. Mardian accused John Dean 3d today of fabricating some of his testimony about the early days following the June, 1972, break-in.

During his eighth and final day on the stand; the prosecution's star witness was questioned by David Bress, a former U.S. attorney for the District of Co-lumbia. Dean's detailed narrative of the nine months of the coverup remained unshaken nnder cross-examination by Mr. Bress and lawyers for the other defen-

Next on the witness list was convicted Watergate conspirator Howard Hunt, whom the prosecutors have asked to be classified as a court witness. They said that while they need Hunt's testimony, they do not wish to vouch for his credibility, because, they said, the former CIA agent was less than truthful when testifying under immunity before Watergate grand furies in 1973.

"During these sessions," the prosecutors said in legal papers, "it became apparent to the government that Hunt was not being entirely candid with the grand jury." They said that Hunt. even when told he would not be prosecuted for his testimony, tesmy gruc believe, incompletely."

FBI Reports

In cross-examining Dean, Mr. Bress questioned the former White House counsel about his testimony that Mr. Mardian suggested Dean obtain preliminary FBI reports shortly after the break-in at Democratic National Committee headquarters.

Mr. Bress asserted that one of the leaders of the break-in team. Gordon Liddy, and not Mr. Mardian, urged Dean to ask for the reports to keep track of the early investigation.

"What you learned about the lead sheets [FBI reports] is what you learned from former FBI "Right now, I think there may be a better chance that his name agent Liddy," said Mr. Bress, his will be withdrawn than have it voice rising to almost a shout. By an 8-1 vote, the justices ordered Mr. Huffman's "brisf" of more than 100 pages stricken from the court's records.

Air. Huffman's case argued for the reversal of an overturned conviction of a Lima Ohio, theater operator for showing allegedly obscene motion pictures. Mr. Huffman had ordered the theater closed as a public nuisance.

The justices may also have objected to his inclusion of an appendix of more than 4,500 still pictures of sexual activity, taken from the motion pictures at issue. The unusual court order appeared related to efforts by Chief Justice Warren Burger and some of his colleagues to ease the court's mounting work load by insisting on more readily readable legal papers. The dissenter from the order was Justice William Douglas, who has maintained that the court is not overworked. There had been a warning that the court was prepared to insist on a more economical style. Last January, the justices issued an unsigned order instructing the clerk not to accept papers that fail to meet rules as to the form and size of briefs.

U.S. Is Training Elite Troops For Swift World Deployment

By Drew Middleton

(NYT).-The 1st Ranger Battalion, a deep-penetration force, is being welded into an elite unit among the pinewoods, swamps and sandy hills of this yest fort. The battalion was activated by the Army in August. It is to be with a basic mission of rapid deployment by air wherever a U.S. military presence is required. The formation of the three battalions reflects the growing conviction in the Defense Department that the forces must be prepared as much for swift intervention across the world as for a major war against the Soviet Union in Europe. To military planners these battalions are a weapon that could be deployed to safeguard U.S. economic, strategic or political interests anywhere from the Middle East to the Andes Mountains and from Norway's North Cape to the Indian Ocean

With America increasingly dependent on raw materials from countries whose friendship could turn to hostility overnight, the establishing of the Ranger force seems rational to planners. Only the Essentials

The organization of this battalion of 588 men reflects the Rangers' drive to build a force unencumbered by nonessentials. The headquarters company has about 50 men a quarter of the number of a similar company in a line division. The cooks and communications specialists, like every-one else in the battalion, have qualified as paratroopers Rangers, and combat would find them covering the headquarters company's points on the move. All essential equipment is carried by the Rangers. The battalion is lightly armed, with nothing heavier than 60-mm mortars. In action it would rely on bombers or artillery for heavier sup-

The mixture seems to be working. The grin on the face of Ranger Bill Gardner at he slipped out of a helicopter down a rope to the squad fanning out in the brush below; the seriousss with which an officer says, "Getting this outfit going, it's sort of like a crusade"; the colo-nel commanding and the sergeaut major leading an exercise and jumping together from the rocking helicopter into the black velvet night, are all aspects of this search for elite status.

every member from Lt. Col. Kenneth Leuer down has volunteered four times: for the Army, for airborne training, for Rangers training and finally for this special unit. The personnel is a mixture of Vietnam veterans and the new professionals. Almost all the officers served in Vietnam, as did a high percentage of the non-commissioned officers. The great majority of the privates are innocent of combat experience. Elite units are the subject of some controversy in military circles. Some senior officers regard the creation of Hitler's Waffen SS and the present KGB divisions in the Soviet Army as a source of weakness rather than strength.

Such forces, they contend, become a cause of dissension, envied by regular units who believe often with reason, that the elite troops get the best equipment,

Picked Officers

The late Gen. Creighton Abrams, who, as chief of staff, supported the Ranger battalions and picked their officers, believed however, that elite units like this would set a standard in toughness, enterprise and discipline that the rest of the Army would emulate and that, as Ranger noncoms "graduated" to other units their influence would improve the entire Army

Progress already has been made toward the achievement of a unit personality. For example, there are no monstaches or shocks of long hair in this battalion. There is a glorification of Spartan living and physical achievement. Rangers tell a visitor that the morning included a seven-mile run followed by a four-and-ahalf-mile forced march. Pride is still taken in the battalion's feat of parachuting into Fort Stewart and marching to its quarters in Angust weather, weather that was classified by the Army as Category Four-that is, weather in which all units are confined to

Group Files Suit To Get Access to 147 Nixon Tapes

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (WP). -A group of writers, lawyers, film makers and historians-including such well known names as Lillian Hellman, John Hersey and Arthur Schlesinger jr.-filed suit bere yesterday in U.S. District Court to gain access to at least 147 tape recordings from the Nixon White House years.

The suit, filed under the Freedom of Information Act, specifies those tapes that were subpoensed by the House Judiciary Com-mittee in its impeachment hear-ings during the summer. All 147 tapes were never turned over, but Richard Nixon did make public transcripts of about 41 of

The plaintiffs, members of a New York organization called the Committee for Public Justice, previously has asked for disclosure of the material from the General Services Administration. The GSA denied that request earlier this month because it doesn't have custody of the tapes and the Presidential Libraries Act of 1955 exempts presidential materials from the provisions of the Freedom of Information Act.

UN Report Finds A-Test Particles At Lowest Level

this is a "realistically attainable"

DNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Oct. 25 (UPI).-Radioactive contamination from nuclear-weapons tests has fallen to the lowest level in almost 20 years, according to a United Nations report, The report said that the presence of strontium-90 and cesium-137-two of the most dangerous nuclear particles—is the lowest since a UN scientific committee began monitoring radioactive fallout in 1955. The decrease in the atmospheric levels of strontium-90 and cestian-137, which are transmitted to humans through food, is considered a major spur to a new superpower agreement keeping nuclear tests underground.

The committee's report to the Accombin presence of fallout has fallen in the Northern and Southern Hemispheres since the outlawing of most atmospheric atomic tests in the mid-1960s. The report said that contamination of food by strontium-90 and cesium-137 "was too low to be detected" except in specific areas, such as in the vicinity of nuclear power plants. U.S. Clocks to Go Back WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP).

11 Candidates Return Money Offered by AMA

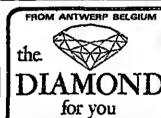

WASHINGTON, Oct. 25 (AP). At least 11 congressional candidates have returned contributions from the American Medical Association's political organization because they believe that voters are skeptical of politicians who take campaign money from special-interest groups.

"The special - interest groups have turned so many people off the election process following Watergate, said Edward Murnane, campaign manager for Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill. "It is a form of influence-peddling the American people have indicated they will not tolerate."

The returns of the contributions were disclosed in campaign fi-nance records filed with the House of Representatives by the AMA's political organization.

The money is distributed by the American Medical Political Action Committee, one of the richest special-interest groups supporting political campaigns. A spokesman said that the group has contributed to at least 220 Senate and House candidates this year and will give money to more campaigns before the Nov. 5 election. David Baldwin, a spokesman for the AMA, said that the political action committee built its campaign fund with contributions averaging $25 to $30. The largest single offering was $125, he said.

Yekaterina Furtseva, 63, Soviet Minister of Culture

By Hedrick Smith

MOSCOW, Oct. 25 (NYT).-Yekaterina Furtseva, 63, Minister of Culture and the only woman in Soviet history to he chosen a member of the ruling inner circle of the Communist party, died today of a heart attack.

A vigorous, energetic woman born to a family of textile workers, she followed a political career often colored by controversy, as an ally of the late premier and party leader Nikita Khrushchev.

She rose to membership in the ruling Communist party Presid'um in June, 1957, after helping Khrushchev in his power struggla with rivals that year, beld a post as a national party secretary and then became minister of culture in May, 1960—a post she held until her death.

Fading Star

Her political star had been fading in recent years, especially after a scandal earlier this year over ber construction of a $170,000 dacha outside Moscow for her daughter, using state materials at burgain wholesale prices. She was officially reprimanded, made to rcpay a large portion of the cost of the dacha and passed over as a candidate for the Suprem Soviet, the nominal Soviet legislature, where she had served for 20 years.

Only personal intervention by pa. leader Leonid Brezhnev was reported to have saved her from being dropped as a minister when the cabinet was officially reconstituted this past summer.

Although she outspekenly condemned Alexander Solzhenitsyn and was publicly critical of abstract modern art, ber passing was privately lamented by a number of liberal Soviet intellectuals who feared that a more conservative figure might replace the senior Soviet representative. It was reported that former critics of Khrushchev had long wanted her removed from the Council of Ministers as one of the last holdovers of the Khrushchev ers, and some had seized the dacha scandal as a pretext for replacing her.

In the sphere of domestic culture, Mrs. Furtseva was known as a firm administrator who generally took a tough line but had favorites like Bolshoi hallerina Maya Plisetskaya, poet Yevgeny Yevtushenko and even cellist Mstislav Rostropovich, for whom sbe made exceptions to general

Italian Aide Says Coup Plot

ROME, Oct. 25.—Rightist terrorists planned to pollute Italian aqueducts with radioactive material to cause panic as a first step in a coup which was scheduled to take place two months ago. Defense Minister Giulio An-dreotti said yesterday. Mr. Andreottl told a par-liamentary committee that the plot was one of many attributed to rightists.

"The Defense Intelligence Service (SID) delivered a report to the judiciary Oct. 1. mentioning the terribla threat of terrorist use of radioactive material, including pollution of aqueducts," Mr. Andreotti told the Chamber Deputies Defense Committee. He said the plan was "analytically studied and was to be carried out by means of the theft of said material in a north Italian nuclear center.

"It is believed that specific arrest warrants were issued also as a result of this report." Mr. Andreotti said.

Sixteen persons died in a Milan bank bombing in 1969. A bomb-ing at an anti-Pascist rally in Brescia on May 28, killed eight and a blast on a Rome-Munich train on Aug. 4 killed 12.

Mr. Andreotti also shed more light on a rightist coup attempt which was called off after its first stages on the night of Dec. 8, 1970. Investigators said it was led by the lata Prince Junio Valerio Borghese.

Mr. Andreotti said there were conflicting reports on what hap-pened. He said that "findings by SID are in contrast with what was stated at the time" by the interior minister of that period, Franco Restivo. The statement was seen as confirmation that armed groups had infiltrated the Interior Ministry and that about 200 paramilitary Forest Rangers moved to within a few hundred vards of the national radio and television center here, as widely published news reports said.

F"empt Called Off The order to attack never came and the attempt was called off for undisclosed reasons. Prince Borghese, a Fascist war hero, died in Spain in August. Members of his clandestine National Front, mostly diehard Fascists, are still operating in the country, Mr. Andreotti said. The minister ruled out any cooperation with the plotters from the armed forces.

Role of Doctor, a Suicide, Is Questionable

Tracing Bizarre Death of an Amin Ex-Wife

By Dial Torgerson

NAIROBI Oct. 25.-The soldiers exhumed the body of Dr. Peter Mbalu Mukasa, put hand-cuffs on it and took it from the family burial plot in southwest Uganda to Kampala, the capital. This month, it is still in the mortuary of Kampala's Mulago Hospital. The family is afraid to try to claim it. Mr. Mukasa poisoned himself rather than be questioned about the death in August of Kay Adroa Amin, a former wife of Uganda's President Idi Amin. In Uganda, where it is an honor to be buried with one's ancestors, Dr. Mukasa has been denied that privilege.

Question Remains And the question remains, two months after Mrs. Amin's bisarre death, whether the doctor was responsible for it.

Many persons in Uganda believe that Gen. Amin had his former wife killed, and that the body was cut in four parts and hidden in the doctor's car to incriminate him.

Gen- Amin's version is that she died during an unsuccessful, illegal abortion performed by the physician, who panicked and dissected the body.

In :ither case, Dr. Mukasa, a respected Kampala surgeon about 40 years of age, must have realized that he would have had to face interrogation by Uganda's military police, whose tortures and killings on Gen. Amin's be-

On Aug. 13, the doctor gathered his wife and five children, aged 2 to 7, around him in their home in the Kampala suburb of Rubaga. He told them he had to give them medicine for a new strain of malaria.

Doubts Arise Over Ethiopia Grain Crisis Relief Experts Claim

Drought Pcak Is Over By David B. Ottaway

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 25 (WP) -There is a major controvers; between Ethiopia and internetional relief donors over whether there is a worsening drought situation in the country and over the government's latest request for nearly 280,000 tons of grain for the coming year.

"Wa know a crisis is around the corner and I do not want to wait until it is here," said Shimelis Adugus, commissioner of the government's Relief and Rehabilitation Commission.

"This prediction is quite contrary to the general impressor of the agencies and other agri-cultural experts," an internating relief official said.

Ethiopia, the African nation that suffered the highest death toll (100,000 to 200,000) from the worst drought of the century or this continent, made its new aid request after three months ou!!! good-to-excellent rains across most of the country and in the fact of preliminary foreign estimate:

Some are far more concerned now about the drough and flood disasters in India Pakistan and Bangladesh, where hundreds of millions of persons are threatened with famine. Drought Pockets

Part of the controversy involves Ethiopia's continuing reluctance to tap its own a allable resource to deal with what most foreign relief experts feel are now no more than "pockets of drought scattered across this mountain kingdom. The government now has him than $300 million in gold and foreign-exchanga holdings, an alltime high, and many donor nations feel that some of that money should be used to purchase cereals. While Ethlopia has refrom a variety of international sources, it has so far purchased only 2,000 tons from local commercial markets estimated in May to have es puch as 30,000 tons in steek

Furthermore, it appears that the country's new ruling Provi-sional Military Council has plans to use a good portion of these holdings to buy arms rather than grain. Recent reports from Washington said that Ethiopia is planning to spend upwards of $100 million to buy heavy tanks, aircraft and other military equipment to deal with a continuing border threat from Soviet-armed Somalia.

The state-controlled news or ganizations are saying that 3 to million Ethiopians are sufferin in 11 of the country's 13 province from a "worsening drought situs tion." The relief commission ha requested 278,000 tons of grai from the international communiplus another 60,000 tons to establish an emergency stockpile.

But foreign relief officials wh attended the meeting two weel ago at which the Ethiopian r quest was made say they we unable to obtain any emignation of how the government arrived the 278,000-ton figure witho knowing the results of the November harvest.

In addition, reliable foreign I lief sources say that a report co tradicting the commission's of cial evaluation of the drought e uation has been suppressed. T study was made by Roger Hay British nutritional expert wor ing for the commission on beh of the United Nations.

Heart Disease Link to Coffee Unconfirmed

Boston Researchers Find No Tie to Onset

BOSTON, Oct. 25 (AP), -Researchers say they find no evidence that drinking coffee leads to development of beart disease But they say it could be harmful to people who already cave heart problems.

A study published yesterday in the New England Journal of Medicine concluded that there was no evidence that coffee "is factor in the development of atherosclerotic cardiovascular dis-

The researchers found that men who drank more than four cups of coffee a day had a higher than expected death rate from cardiovascular disease. But they said that could be because of a link between coffee drinking and cigarette smoking.

Persons who did not drink coffee smoked an average of 8.7 eigarettes a day, while those drinking more than seven cups of coffee smoked an average of 21.8 cigarettes daily, the study

THE ART MARKET...

Cologne and Dusseldorf Vie in Avant-Garde Field

By Souren Melikian

COLOGNE, Oct. 25 (IET).—The ert beld every fall in the neighboring cities of Cologne and Dusseldorf offered a striking contrast But both closed yesterday on a similar note of ambiguity

In Dusseldorf, the 4th Internationaler Markt für aktuelle Kunst reminded me of a Middle Eastern caravan that had just camped for the night: There were 217 galleries from all over the world with endless stands sprawling over two vast halls, giving the impression of hopeless confusion. Someooe was always readjusting something somewhere Flimsy low partitions separated stands that sometimes seemed deliberately to plagiarize one another the better to confuse the innocent visitor. Someone who must believe (erroneously) that he has a special gift for organization numbered the subdivisions (Hallen, in German) by letters and the calleries by numbers so that the eye was caught by huge A, B, C, etc., panels giving the show a Kafka-like eir. The feeling was strengthened by the surprising diversity of works. At one stand, (Inge Baecker of Bochum) walls were covered with black and white photographs A closer look revealed that they were photos of works of art or, more often, happenings, And some showed top American work such as Allan Kaprow's "Stained Glass

Next to Inge Baecker's black walls came the stand of Sam Maerkle of Toronto, crackling and

After Dusseldorf, the Cologne fair, in a smaller huilding with "only" 73 participants from nine countries, was all cool orderliness and elecance Called the Internationaler Kunstmarkt Köln it was of somewhat higher quality than the Dusseldorf undertaking

Invitation Only

Several dealers made it plain that, in their view, this was The place for the elite. Participation was by invitation only, whereas in Dusseldorf anyone could show for a fee. However, not all dealers saw it that way. A few among the better known, such as the Galerie Denise René-Hans Meyer of Dusseldorf, had chosen to play it safe and participate in both fairs. In Cologne, as in Dusseldorf, monotony was the most striking feature although on a lesser scale.

Commercially, there were some stunning success stories. In Dusseldorf, Inge Baecker sold 80,000

This young dealer began four years ago, specializing in the American school. She has now extended her interest to the avant-garde in Europe. Visitors to her stand, she said, were intrigued by the contrast in size of her stand and the tiny black and white photo exhibits. The trick certainly worked Surprisingly (in view of the current monetary squeeze) she sold to museums. Two days before the Dusseldorf fair opened officially, she sold a large square composition with comic strip inserts done by the American Allan Kaprow in 1956 to a Dutch museum for 30,000 deutsche marks

In Cologne, the higgest success story was that of the Galerie André Emmerich of Zurich, a branch of the New York gallery of the same name, which has specialized in American art for many years. The Zurich opera-tion was opened in May, 1973. The firm represents such painters as Sam Francis, Helen Frankenthaler and Robert Motherwell and now has a regular following among European collectors, the Zurich director Maria Reinshagen aid, This explains, she said, why the gallery sold more than 400,000 deutsche marks worth of art during the five-day fatr. Of five Frankenthelers on display, three were sold almost at once. One was acquired by the Wallraf Richartz Museum of Cologne, which has built up the largest and most representative collection of 20thcentury American art in Europe.

A Milan Gallery

Mrs. Reinshagen said that business this year at the fair was just as satisfactory as it had been the year before in Dusseldorf. She believes that her gallery is not feeling the economic pinch because, as she put it in English, "We offer an American program represented by only two other galleries in Germany," Sbc pointed out that visitors to the Cologne fair were mostly German, This included museum curators interested in avant-garde work and starting Oct. 30. There are two more Bluhm shows in the offing

as a result of the Cologne fair.

This, Rubboli says, carries a lot of weight with prospective buyers.

A similar comment was made by

Inge Backer, who said that this year people were asking for refer-fair accompanied by advisers and

He sold 154,000 detrische marks worth gano conceded that the price was of paintings doing much better on the high side than he had done at the Basel fair

The contradictory data seem to suggest that there are still a lot of people with money to spend on art-but that they are taking a considerably harder, more cautious approach. The dreaded standstill has not come but the freewheeling days are over. When it comes to what's fashionable, the American painters are far ahead

However, Rodolfo Siviero, surrounded by precious paintings, drawings, and sculptures, is neither a curator nor a collector. He is an art sleuth.

For the pest 30 years, Siviero, 35, who has the rank of minister plenipotentiary, has headed the office for the recovery of works of art. His task: a relentless hunt for art objects smug-gled or stolen from Italy, Lest year, 8,500 works of art were stolen in Italy. Siviero is still trying to track down some of the thousands of art objects aken from Italy by the Germans during World War II.

"We've got back about 4,000 pleces," he says, "but there are still about 1,000 items still missing somewhere in Germany and Austria, we think."

At the moment, Siviero is conducting delicate negotiations with foreign governments and mus directors, negotiations that he hopes will lead to the return to Italy of among other things, the Euphronics vase at New

A large Matisse painting, "Mi-chaels," was one of the few to Salvador Dali's "Bettle Around a Dandellon," bought by an Italian dealer for $100,000, surprised the audiction by going some $10,000 over its estimate.

But a Picasso painting, "Dora Maar," sold last year to a Japanese dealer for $160,000, was bought back at $130,000. · The auction had been looked to as e barometer of art prices for the coming season, and had throughout the world However most of the dealers were cautious in their assessment, blaming the poor response on overhigh estimates and reserves. "It's time that collectors understood that expectations are too high," said Klaus Perls, a New York dealer. "If Polaroid stock is selling for $22 why should their paintings continue to bring high prices?" Generally, the sale confirmed a slide in impressionist prices and demand for this school of work, but Paul Rewald, head of Sotheby Parks Bernet's impres sionist and modern paintings department, said that in view of the depressed economy "an enormous effort" had been made to persuade consigners to lower their reserves—the minimum price below which a work would not be sold—and that most con-signers had been receptive. Lower Reserves

Over the past two weeks, reserves were altogether lowered by $800,000, he said. He characterized the sale as a "difficult one" and said there was obviously little demand for impressionist we have a real depression." The auction, which had been estimated to gross $6 million to $7 million, actually brought $4.785 million. It was in sharp contrast to a similar sale last May which fetched $8.3 million.

"I have no doubt that the Euphronics vase came from Italy," he says. "But getting things back that were removed illegally from Italy is not a simple matter.

The laws and regulations vary from country to country as to the legal ownership of a work of art that has gone through several hands. In some countries, you could hang a Leonardo da Vinci on your wall five years after it was stolen and be perfeetly legal."

So Siviero, whose office comes under the jurisdiction of the Foreign Ministry, first tries the lengthy diplomatic approach to other museum men and foreign governments. "Basically we try to get the other governments or the owners of these works of art to recognize the well-founded international principle," he says, "and that is artifacts of a nation's pairimony illegally remov-ed from a country should be returned. Surely all men of cul-ture should agree on this."

Siviero's problem, of course, is that men of culture often do not recognize the principle. Has the British Museum offered to return the Elgin marbles to Greece? Or Italy itself sent back to Egypt the obelisks now in Rome?

Similarly, the Metropolitan Museum maintains that it has a clear and valld title to the Enphronics vase for which it paid an estimated $1 million. Then, too, Italy does not have the funds to compensate buyers who might decide to return the works of Boston Raphael The Boston Raphael was worth $800,000, and Siviero was instrumental in putting U.S. legal pressure on the museum, which resulted in the return.

A native of Florence, Siviero got into the art detection field during World War II. As a member of the resistance, he provided information to the Allies, and having been trained as an art critic and historian specializing in sance periods, be kept a close eye on the works of art that were systematically stripped from Italian churches and museums and shipped off to Germany.

He and other Florentines, in fact, transported some of the most precious works in the Uffizi and Pitti galleries in Florence to the peasants in the countrysica to be hidden from the Ger-

"Toward the end of the war," he recalls, "I began working with the Allied Commission of Fine Arts to track down the things the Germans had taken. That started me in the field."

After the war. Siviero was put in charge of the art recovery office, and he spent five years in Germany attempting to locate the hundreds of masterpieces that were stashed away all over the country: Tintorettos, Titians, Tiepolos, Canalettos, Rubense Caravaggios. Through his efforts, too, the

My own first choices (actually nothing can be bought on the premises) would be a monumental stone head of a horse dating from the 10th century in China, or a superb 18th-century Philadelphia highboy. But this will give you some idea of the range of the exhibits assembled from the stocks of 138 dealers who belong to CINOA, an international association of art dealers, and who are here demonstrating what great and varied art is still available on the world market.

The Metropolitan, in inviting this show (similar events have also been held in Paris, London and Amsterdam), is recognizing, it says, "the important role played by dealers in works of art in the formation of museums and private collections."

It's this aspect of the project if you specify dealers' roles in the taste of collectors. This can be both good and bad. It's good when an Andrew Mellon was persuaded by that most lordly of dealers, Duveen, to buy top Italian old masters which eventually went into the National Gallery in Washington, It's bad when dozens of lesser collectors of the period were also persuaded to buy British 18th-century portraits because it gave them an sura of distinguished but ersatz ancestry, and the result was that for de-cades the popular notion of quality in art was those generally second-rate portraits hanging in

Mr. Simon's skills are superior to those of Alun Owen's, as ex-hibited in his "The Male of the Species" at the Piccadilly, three one-act works with excellent performances from Edward Woodward as three expert seducers. Michelle Dotrice, too, is appealing as the eternal victim although she is given less opportunities to display her talents.

Mr. Owen is a playwright of great talent but here—in work originally written for televisionhis material is thin and shallow. Once the pattern is set in the first play-with Mr. Woodward as a to his daughter about his rela-tionships with women—it is merely repeated in the others. The third begins with a slight varia-tion as Miss Dotrice plays hard to get, but even that ends in the same manner, with the male triumphant.

There is little attempt to examine the psychology of the compulsive seducer, merely a chance for Mr. Woodward to display his abilities to play a Scots-man, a Welshman and an Irishman which he does with great skill. Each play resolves itself in a confrontation between man and girl that are both artificial and unconvincing. It is strictly a male chauvinist view of sexual refationships, as a battleground in which women are always the

Both plays, though, are considerably better than the revival of an ancient boulevard comedy. André Roussin's "The Little Hut" at the Duke of York's, This 25year-old play has transferred to London from the recent Oxford Theatre Festival, which, judging from this and the festival's other success "The Dame of Sark," seems to have been a celebration of senility. The play, originally directed in London by the young Peter Brook, was once considered daring in the way it dumped a wife, her husband and lover on an island and watched them work out their relationships. But now it seems dull. Only the fact of a desert island existence could make the character played by Geraldine McEwen seem attractive and there is also an excessively stiff performance from Gerald Harper as

Danish Art From Classicism to Romanticism, Museum of Rome, Palazzo Braschi, Rome, through

This is a small but interesting cludy of the influence classic Rome exercised on Danish artists living in the city from the beginning to the middle of the 19th century. There are drawings by Thorvaldsen, of course, and cool, delicate oils of temples by Koebke. His loving attention to detail of plant and animal life among the ruins is rendered in his drawings. Eckersberg shows in his paintings that the Via Sacra was as tidy as a Victorian park before modern excavation began, Portraits in oil or pen of the pinkfaced relatives of these Northern painters are as homey and rugged as Anderson's prose. This is a careful representation of modest but thoughtful work.

In the permanent collection the vivid watercolors of Pinelli (1781-1835) of Roman mores and customs and the sweeping "vedute" by Caffi (1809-66) should not be overlooked.

Giosetta Fioreni, Oca. 42 Via dell'Oca, Rome, through Nov.

Bits and shreds of things, pencil shavings, buttons, like thistledown have come to settle on delicate off-kilter drawings on schoolbook paper. Floroni has reminisced about her childhood before in similar studies, but this time, neither self-indulgent nor sentimental, she makes her sophis-ticated drawing-collages with a pleasing freshness and a masterful hand. Once close to a Roman school of refined pop whose followers now have either turned to social realism or supertasteful repetitive abstraction, Fioroni with this show, while still drawing a little on the willful language of Novelli or Twombly, has evolved a whimsy and artlessness of Chadwick's recent bronzes are technically accomplished. Recumbent or standing figures with insect legs clothed in planed volumes of drapery topped by triangular heads if female or cubes if male, come in pairs. The faceless royal conples, something lika chessmen, make somber monuments. But a single Max Ernst-like invention has become a formula with variations repeated ad infinitum: Often figurative elements like the queen's realistically molded breasts seem to strain through the modernistic convention. Chadwick, like Moore with his holes, hides his basic academicism behind contemporary devices.

Ford vs. Ford

stage on which two plays are being acted side by side, with President Ford the leading character in both. In one scenario, he earns applause for having replated a devious. solitary, autocratic Richard Nixon with his own gregarious frankness and simplicity. In the other, he disturbs the audience with inexplicable deviations and decisions that shock and confound political friends and opponents alike.

As White House policy decisions increasingly run counter to expectations based on the President's appealing personal qualities, the glaring contradictions between promise and performance call for scrutiny. Examples of Mr. Ford's questionable decision-making abound in the first two months of his pres-

 After stating publicly that he would consider extending a presidential pardon to Mr. Nixon after the judicial process had run its course, Mr. Ford suddenly reversed himself by granting a pre-emptive unconditional pardon for any and all crimes Mr. Nixon may have committed during his presidency.

 Although he knew that the answers to serious questions concerning abuses of executive power in the Nixon administration remain to be extracted from the former President's tapes and documents, Mr. Ford hastily, and without consulting Congress, the special Watergate prosecutor or the courts, signed a highly dubious agreement that would place these materials in Mr. Nixon's sole custody.

 Although he himself has acknowledged that Mr. Nixon was guilty of impeachable offenses, Mr. Ford approved of huge payments and privileges to the former President far beyond the requirements of law. He even authorized the continued transmission of secret intelligence reports to Mr. Nixon by military jet.

 While capitalizing in his early addresses to the nation on the theme of compromise and cooperation with Congress, Mr. Ford

The White House currently appears as a has now chosen an extreme partisan role on the hustings. Even allowing for verbal excesses that accompany normal last-minute appeals to the voters, Mr. Ford's extravagant predictions of dire consequences that would flow from Democratic victories raise questions about the sincerity of his appeals to

• Confronted by the desperate mayors of the nation's cities, he pledged strong personal support to enactment of legislation to aid urban mass-transit; but when the bill bogged down in the House Rules Committee. he remained silent, explaining his passivity by declaring that the legislation was already a fait accompli. Similarly after telling Congress that it must give highest priority to national health insurance, he let the subject drop with nothing achieved.

Since Mr. Ford obviously is not wanting in congressional experience, one explanation for these apparent contradictions is lack of personal conviction. Many of the crucial Issues requiring his leadership run counter to the parochial conservatism of his prepresidential years in the House.

Apart from any specific policy decisionsand even more disconcerting for the long run of his stewardship-President Ford appears generally to have been slow to understand that he is not the routine inheritor of a departed administration. He is President only because his predecessor and his entourage betrayed the public trust. In many respects, Mr. Ford has been suggesting by his actions that he is perpetuating a discredited regime.

But the American people are looking for something far better than that, for an entirely new chapter in the presidency. What Mr. Ford needs to do, and do quickly, is to throw off the incubus of the Nixon administration that still seems to be weighing him down, and to respond fully and freely to the nation's urgent need for wise and independent leadership.

To Keep Pretoria In

Nothing would be gained either for the cause of world peace and security or for the effectiveness of the UN by expelling the white government of South Africa from the UN. On the contrary, the chances for a peaceful evolution to self-determination and majority rule in both South Africa and Namibia (South-West Africa) will be greater if the Pretoria government remains in the organization of which it is an original member.

South Africa's continued control over Namibia has been illegal since the UN General Assembly in 1966 terminated Pretoria's League of Nations mandate over the territory. But for all the rhetoric at the UN. no state or any combination of member states is going to try to oust South Africa from Namibia by force.

The best way to bring about South Africa's exodus from the territory is to keep pressure on Pretoria to validate the recent pledge of its foreign minister that "all options are open" for Namibia, including full independence if its people should so decide "in the exercise of their right to self-determination." No one will expect miracles but it is somewhat encouraging that South Africa's stance on Namibia is changing.

As for the situation inside its own borders, Pretoria's racial apartheid is abhorrent. But expulsion from the UN not only would fail to hasten eradication of apartheid or the coming of majority rule; it would be of dubious legality under the UN Charter. There is much hypocrisy in the loud advocacy of expulsion by nations whose practice of racial and tribal persecution is fully as obnoxious as S uth African apartheid.

In an organization whose aim has rightly been the achievement of universality, expulsion of a member would set a dangerous precedent-as indeed did the ouster of Taiwan. Any such resolution should be rejected in the Security Council, or vetoed by the United States if necessary.

World Economy

The conclusion must be that 1975 will indeed be a recession year, but that it will also see increasingly vigorous reflationary measures in all the main centers. Unemployment in most countries may continue to rise throughout the year, but by the end of it the bottom of the recession in output is likely to have passed The greater danger is that the reflationary measures will continue strongly long after the recovery is in fact established, thereby precipitating excessive expansion and a repetition of the crisis of 1973—only worse this time.

Peking and the EEC

The red carpet laid out by Peking for Danish Premier Poul Hartling illustrates the importance China attaches to EEC countries and its expectations of West European unity. Mr. Hartling's visit had a particular significance after Britain's Labor government had been returned to power. China's hopes that Britain will play an important role in the European community have dimmed. Peking now looks to the other EEC members, large and small, to form a united. and strong community as a wedge against what it described as "the superpower hegemony" of the United States and the Soviet Union.

Giscard's EEC Summit Call

Since the fiasco of the Copenhagen summit almost a year ago, there has been an understandable reluctance on the part of some member countries, notably West Germany, to try again. There has been a growing realization that such meetings are worthwhile only if they are carefully prepared and stripped of the unfulfillable commitments of the past: For example, rapid progress towards economic and monetary union. At least on the face of it, this view has also been accepted by the French. Yet, with only a few weeks to go, there has been very little effective preparation for the meeting in

Moscow and the Olympic Games

The holding of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow presents a host of challenges which not only stem from the atmosphere of détente but will also test its theories. In practical terms there is no doubt that the Soviet Union has the facilities. The seriousness with which sport is taken on a national level means that there will be more than enough room for athletes to run, jump, wrestle, ride, swim and throw missiles to their limits. Moscow should have no difficulty either in dealing with the traffic and visitors attracted by such events. But what will be tested is bureaucracy, which is notoriously cumbersome and slow-moving.

A Moot Point If, in fact, this was an accurate description of the agreement, it was violated in February, 1971. That month, a nuclear-powered November-class submarine with a tender visited Clenfuegos. Whether the submarine actually was serviced in the port remains a most point, but there were no U.S. protests. Nor did the United States protest subsequent visits by Echo-class submarines nuclearpowered vessels carrying tactical missiles.

It seems evident that the Sovict Union has been probing the margins of the 1970 understanding. It has done the following. in this order: put a nuclearpowered attack submarine into Cienfuegos with a tender, put a nuclear-powered tectical missile single events that in isolation apsubmarine into Cienfuegos with a tender, put a diesel-powered strategic missile submarine into a different Cuban port quietly, and put a diesel-powered strategic missile submarine into a different Cuban port publicly. This is just what may be learned from the public record.

Period of Blunders

A Reminder to Ford That He Is President

By James Reston

WASHINGTON.-Every man W who, by the accidents of life, has suddenly had to take over the terrible responsibilities of the American presidency, has gone through a temporary period of staggering and blandering, and President Ford is no exception. He is getting into trouble now because he is talking like a party leader instead of like a president and talking a great deal before he has had time to decide whether the main problem of the economy

Lyndon Johnson's first major decision, after the murder of Jack Kennedy, was to introduce his first budget. I happened to be at his ranch in Texas while he was pondering this decision. He new over to Austin and consulted with John Connally on the matter. "I don't want to go over $100 bil-lion," he said, speaking like a senator, and Connally agreed that that was bad policy but good poli-tics. So the budget went in under the magic "hundred" and everybody said he was a responsible man, except those who knew the

is inflation or recession.

Truman Erred

Harry Truman stumbled into difficulty carly in his administration by making gutsy and often provocative statements withoutthinking of the consequences. Even after he had been in office for a few years, during the Korean war, he suggested that atomic weapons might be used against the Chinese on the judgment of the American commanders in the field.

The British were so startled by this casual news conference re-mark that Prime Minister Attlee came flying over to Washington to find out what was going on. What was going on was that Truman was still blowing off like a senator without authority. A natural, spontaneous man, like Ford he simply forgot that a president has to be more careful and often has to speak as if he

Since the combination of a quasi-fascist Peron government in the 1940s and the creation of Israel there has been Israeli pressure on Argentine Jews to emigrate. Now that Argentina appears on the verge of new political disintegration and a possible resurgence of fascism, this trend is rising.

The Israeli government and the Jewish Agency combine in advertising a steady invitation to Argentine Jews, urging them to come here and avoid anti-Semitism (whose threat is sometimes exaggerated). This state sends leading citizens including ministers on frequent trips to Buenos Aires.

Their purpose is not as in the United States—to seek increased financial contributions. Argentina's Jewish community ta a

Therefore, Israel makes every effort to increase its size. Jerusalem promises tree transportation here and allows any Argentine settlers to bring their possessions—without paying the usual import taxes. To the contrary, if an Argentine settler becomes disappointed and wirbes to return to his original home. he must repay the Israeli government its outlays for travel costs plus loans and benefits pefore he can depart.

Whether this combination of proffered inducements and a posble return to Argentina of some form of fascism (with its har-binger of anti-Semitism) will encourage a truly large termioration here remains to be seen. But there is no doubt the government relies on the Argentine Jews as one of the principal. sources of new immigration from abroad.

Before the creation of an andependent Israel, the Palestine ares had already become a point of settlement for East European Jews. The Hitler holocaust that overwhelmed Germany and the lands it occupied enormously accelerated this movement. When Israel proclaimed its existence and confirmed its reality by winning early wars, the original Jewish colony was joined by the tragic survivors of Europe's concentration camps. Swedes Act on Work Monotony MALMO, Sweden, Oct. 25 (AP-DJ).—Faster than industrial enterprises elsewhere, companies around Sweden are facing up to a nasty fact of modern industrial life; high pay does not neces-sarily make for a happy worker.

Swedish industrialists see the same symptoms of employee disaffection as exist elsewhere. What distinguishes the most ambitious Swedish efforts to cure the problem are the dual themes of decentralization and dialogue.

The idea is to put some variety and some re-sponsibility into crushingly tedious but crucially important production jobs. If the worker is given more responsibility, he feels more responsible— and more tied to the company, it is reasoned. At Kockums shippard here it seems to work. In 1969, personnel turnover was running at an annual rate of 50 per cent a year and management, hy calling in efficiency experts and pressing for more production, only inflamed the situation. Then management approached the union, got its suggestions, and now uses worker-management committees even for advice on supertanker comstruction schedules. The firm feels it has boosted both production and worker satisfaction.

Now there are work-enrichment experiments all around Sweden. Best-known is the Volvo automobile plant at Kalmar, where the conventional assembly line has been scrapped and groups of workers assemble an entire auto rather than carry out a single operation.

Some other examples in various industries:

• Asea, the big manufacturer of electrical equipment for industry, has moved the office onto the factory floor at a plant in Vasteras that makes relays. Engineers, salesmen, product-design people and other white-collar workers abare facilities with production workers. Curt Nicolin, Asea president, notes that the experiment has sourced efforts to reduce noise, improve lighting and correct other "evils which stem from the manufacturing process."

 At Hallstavik, just outside Stockholm, the Hollens Bruk group has enlisted its workers to help design and build a big paper mill. The idea is to make the working environment as attractive as possible and shape it to the workers' needs.

e At Vasby foundry, a die-casting shop in the Granges group, the 60 production workers have been reorganized into eight semiautonomous groups sharing equally in production bonuses for work turned out by the foundry.

· The Orrefors glassworks, which was suffering from uneven work flow in the grinding and pol-ishing department, turned the operation over to the workers, who reorganized it into three separate production groups. Jobs are rotated to make for variety and interest.

· At the rock-drilling machine assembly department of the Atlas Cocco group, outside Stockholm, workers have replaced the assembly line with a round table for group work and a system of shared monetary rewards.

Sweden's blue collar labor problems began in the late 1960s—ironically, during a boom. With labor in demand, workers were deserting the tedious jobs on the production line. The current changes from assembly line to round table may not sound very thrilling to a white collar observer. For assembly line workers, they can revolutionize their jobs, Instead of doing one operation endlessly, they may do several, or assemble an entire unit, If a worker learns several operations, Joh rotation becomes possible.

Workers also have been clamoring for an end to the old piecework wage system (except for younger workers with abundant energy and a short-term view). But they do not want a complete switchover to fixed wages, Employers agree that the best configuration seems to be a pay package in which 70 to 90 per cent is fixed, and further pay comes from premiums and production

PARIS, Oct. 25 (IET).—A 10-per-cent plunge in imports help-ed the United States reduce its trade deficit last month while a continuing rise in exports pushed West Germany's trade surplus still higher, figures released in Washington and Wiesbaden showed today.

In Washington, the Commerce Department said that imports fell by 103 per cent while exports dropped only 1 per cent, leaving a deficit of $233 million. That shortfall was sharply reduced from the record $1.13-nillion deficit set in August and was the smallest deficit since last April, when the United States achieved a trade surplus of $92.6 million. A sharp drop in imports of food, oil and cars was unatrily responsible for the lower deficit. Germany, meanwhile, said its trade surplus in September rose to 4.073 billion marks from 3.255 billion marks in August and 3.781 hillion marks in September, 1973.

Germany's excess of exports over imports for the first nine months of the year now totals almost 37 hillion marks, well ahead of the 33-billion-mark figure for all of last year. Exports jumped by 81 per cent for the January-to-September period this year compared to 1973, while imports rose more slowly, at 25 per cent.

This has happened despite the increase in the international value of the mark, which made German goods more expensive, and despite the country's huge oil bill. Germany is the piggest oil importer in Europe.

The German statistics office noted that September exports were worth 18.821 billion marks, 3 per cent more than in August, and imports were 2 per cent lower at 14.748 billion marks.

While exports continue to thrive, the domestic economy is close to stagnation and financial observers saw this as one cause for the lower imports.

Big German trade surpluses are usually partly offset by deficits

TOKYO, Oct. 25 (AP-DJ) .-Hitachi's net profit slumped by 32 per cent in the half year ended Sept. 30 due to poor sales of its household appliances, the company reported today. Contributing to the sharp de-cline was the higher cost of labor

Bank Says Sindona Company Is Taken Over by Rome Group

ROME, Oct. 25 (AP-DJ).— Banco di Roma sald today that effective control of Societa Generale Immobiliare (SGI) has passed from the Sindona group to a consortium of Rome con-

The price "covered entirely" the loan that Banco di Roma had made to thancier Michele Sin-dona in exchange for a lien on the SGI shares and on 51 per cent of Banca Unione, That loan totaled $200 million, half in dollars and half in lire, thus valu-ing SGI shares at 600 lire each.

Banco di Roma said the consortium only bought 80 per cent of the 36-per-cent interest that was held by Mr. Sindona and on which Banco di Roma had the lien. The rest "will be taken over by Banco di Roma, or one of its affiliates, or will be joined in a voting bloc with the 80 per cent," the bank said in a brief com-

The loan Mr. Sindona was to repay Dec. 28 has been repaid by one of his holding companies, Finambro SpA, banking sources report, with the funds raised by the sale of the SGI shares.

It has also been reported that the funds used by the consortium for the purchase were in fact borrowed from Banco di Roma, so the effect is that the due bill is against the consortium, rather than Finambro If the original loan to Mr. Sindona has thus been entirely re-paid, Banco di Roma has ap-parently lost its lien on the 51 per cent of Banca Unione that the state-owned bank got as collateral.

Banca Unione, with another Sindons bank, was the parent of Banca Privata Italians, which has been put into bankruptcy and is heing liquidated. An arrest warrant has been issued for Mr. Sindona on the basis of central bank allegations that he falsified the records of Banca Unione in 1970. Mr. Sindona's whereabouts are not known. The informal Rome consortium that bought the SGI shares is a major force in the building in-

French Prices Increase 1.1 Per Cent in Month PARIS, Oct. 25 (AP-DJ).—The French retail price index in-creased L1 per cent in September from August, compared with a rise of 0.8 per cent in August, the Finance Ministry announced September's index with 100 equalling 1970, was 140.1, compared with 138.6 in August and 122.1

For the first nine months, retail prices rose 11.3 per cent. Italian Prices Rise 3% ROME, Oct. 25 (Reuters).—The Italian retail price index rose a record 3.3 per cent last month, making a 24.6 per cent increase as well, bringing their first-year average to 10.8 per cent. The accelerating pattern of wage increases this year has produced average wage gains in major contracts of 9.8 per cent in the 12 months ending Sept. 30, up from 7 per cent in the prior 12 months, the Labor Department Wages still are not keeping pace with prices, however. In the same 12-month period in which wage boosts averaged 9.8 per cent the Labor Department's consumer price index swelled 12.1 per cent. And even the 113-per-cent average wage increase in thirdquarter contracts is still below average boosts in some years before pay controls.

To help cope with the pay-price disparity, more and more unions are pressing for cost-of-living escalator clauses in their contracts to tie periodic wage adjustments to changes in the consumer price index.

The department said escalator clauses were adopted in 110 settlements covering 612,000 workers during 1974's first nine months. "The pickup in coverage this year was in a wide variety of industries, including construction and apparel, where such provisions were previously uncommon," the department said. The department estimates about five million workers are covered by such clauses, up from 45 million as of the second quarter. Though the five million workers are only a small percentage of the total U.S. workforce, they represent about 49 per cent of those covered by major settlements. The new Labor Department statistics also show some impressively large gains from the escasales because it is very early in the model year, which begins in September for most companies although introduction dates were delayed this year to permit dealers to sell some of the 1974 cars that had backed up in inventories.

But consumer worries about the future of the economy have had a dampening effect on new car sales, helping make it the worst new-model introduction period "We need a restoration of consumer confidence," Chrysler chairman Lynn Townsend said Tuesday. "Washington has told everyone not to buy and the recession is here now in the auto industry. This 'don't buy' philosophy is hurting us."

Another deterrent to sales is higher prices. Price tags on the 1975 models are on the average nearly $1,000 above those on 1974 models when they were introduced, and auto industry executives say they may have to raise prices still further because of soaring costs.

How Value Line Can Help You

GET READY NOW for the NEXT BULL MARKET

Value Line expects you may well see the Dow Jones Industrials close to 2000 within the next five years.

Sure, we have inflation and, sure, inflation is bad for stocks and everybody. But consider the implications of the following scenario which in our opinion describes the least improbable event;

Inflation is stopped finally, but only after the price level is 30% to 40% higher. Such a price level means a very much higher Gross National Product — up about 60% in the next five years.

Profits then should go up too, at least as much, because the ratio of corporate profits and dividends to the Gross National Product is right now too low to permit business to expand the way it must if it is to provide jobs, reduce unemployment, and maintain the standard of living of the country. Corporate profits then, as we see it, will probably rise 60% to 80% in the next five years on a 60% rise in the Gross National Product.

Inflation will be a good part of the reason. But once inflation is brought under control at the higher price level, the investor will be looking at earnings of about 5135 a share on the Dow Jones Industrial Average. And he will then also be looking at a normal multiple on these earnings again. Instead of 8.8 times earnings, on the Dow and a current 12% interest rate, the multiple will probably be 13 times again — or even higher — and the interest rate and the real growth rate will both be lower.

Under conditions like these, which are the least improbable that can be foreseen, the Dow Jones Industrial Average will be in the 2000 range.

Yet the Dow Jones Industrials are not the bargain sector of the stock market. The average price-earnings multiple of all ready now—deliberately and with your eyes open.

the stocks of the 1536 monitored by the Value Line Survey which report earnings at all is only 6 times. That means that the run-of-the-mill stocks right now offer an earnings yield of 16%%. And these earnings over the past five years have on average grown at the rate of 9% per annum. The investor then is looking at a market that right oow yields a total return of 25%, if the 9% growth rate of the past five years holds. When inflation has been brought under control and earnings per share are higher, the earnings yield at current price will be 27% or greater on current price. Even with the growth rate then down to 4%, the investor who buys today is locking in an earnings yield plus a growth rate that gives him a total return of around 31% a year.

This is just the average of run-of-the-mill stocks. The outstanding bargains promise even greater returns.

Today's values in the stock market are fantastic, even in terms of the average stock. Just as fantastic as the insane anticipation of everlasting rapid growth that characterized the stock market in the Sixties—against which the Value Line Service warned persistently all during those years.

Insanity in the stock market is always corrected. It will be again. In fact, the only way the market can be stopped from rising to record highs is by dismantling the political economy and turning the nation into a socialist state. On the assumption that this will not happen, we urge you to

Get Ready For the Bull Market That is Coming

We are not unaware of the possibility of financial crisis. Were it not for tight money, the stock market would not be as low as it is. In the end, value will determine stock prices, and value, be assured, is not always the same thing as price. It wasn't the same in the Sixties. It isn't now.

Note: this market is thin—both ways. The intelligent strategy is to prepare to buy deliberately and oo a scale. Not much buying is going to be accomplished at the exact bottom nor, we venture to predict, within 30% of it. So again—get ready now—deliberately and with your eyes open.

To help you identify the coming generation of stock market leaders, as well as stocks you should completely avoid, The Value Lioe Investment Survey continually rates over 1500 stocks for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Months:

100 stocks are ranked I (Highest)
300 stocks are ranked 2 (Above Average)
700 stocks are ranked 3 (Average)
300 stocks are ranked 4 (Below Average)
100 stocks are ranked 5 (Lowest)

Not every stock will always perform exactly in accordance with its Value Line rating, but such a large majority have over a period of many years that we believe you would seriously "short change" yourself if you don't put these Performance ratings to work in your own strategy.

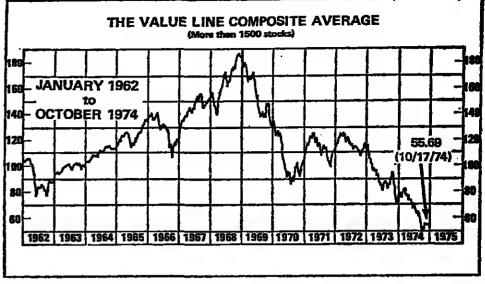

Getting Beneath The Surface

All told, Value Line gives you more comprehensive data and ratings of 1500 stocks than any other source we've ever seen. For each stock, Value Line regularly presents the detailed statistical history—on 23 key investment factors—going back 10 years. Plus future estimates for the oext 3-to-5 years. When you look at the sample Value Line report reproduced in this memorandum—which is typical of the continually updated reports we issue oo each of the more than 1500 stocks—you'll see what we mean by "gettiog beneath the surface."

This, of course, requires a massive research effort. To that end, Value Line employs 70 full-time professional research specialists, whose major purpose is the cootinuing study of investment values. They are backed by extensive computer facilities, which enable us to give you—in addition to the full-page reports—a complete summary of our evaluations of each of the more than 1500 stocks updated every week. You are oever left "hanging."

Time-Tested Experience

Value Line has been through almost every conceivable kind of stock market and economic circumstance. We have assisted private and institutional investors—many thousands of them—for oearly 40 years . . . ever since the depths of the depression of the 1930's. During this long span, countless brokers and other investment advisers have come and gone, but not Value Line. You can count on us.

Rating Today's Investments

Value Lioe recognizes that a great many private investors are, in their own right, highly skilled in making judgments about stock values. So we provide the vital data we believe you need to draw your own investment cooclusions. We do not ask you to follow us "blindly".

We also present our own investment conclusions on each of the more than 1500 stocks, against which you can match your judgments.

Specifically:

- We rate each stock—relative to all the other over 1500 stocks—for Probable Market Performance in the Next 12 Mooths (as outlined above).
- •We rate each stock (from 1 down to 5) for relative investment Safety.
- We estimate each stock's Appreciation Potentiality over the next 3 to 5 years, specifically indicating its price "target range" in that future period.
- We estimate each stock's Dividend Yield during the 12 mooths ahead.

Re-Entry Strategy

If history repeats itself, a great many now-inactive investors will oot return to the market in an active way uotil after many of the biggest opportunities have been snapped up and largely dissipated.

To help you get started now with your re-entry strategy—and we urge you not to "get back in" at all unless you do so with your eyes wide open—we invite you to accept the following special invitatioo.

THE SIXTEENTH ROUND From Number 1 Contender to No. 45472 By Rubin (Hurricane) Carter. Viking, 339 pp. Illustrated. $11.95.

Reviewed by Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

guess what makes Rubin (Hurricane) Carter's "The Sixteenth Round" so peculiarly effective is that it delivers a sharp left hook to one's unexamined assumptions. For Rubin Carter does not seem the most likely candidate to be a black martyr to the American system of justice. To begin with, oce recalls him from the mid-1960s with confused feelings. Because he affected a shaved head, a Fu Manchu mustache, and a baleful glare that made even Sormy Liston seem benign by comparison, one that Mr. Carter was making capital of the white man's fantasy of the "bad nigger," and one felt pleased with one's sophisticated insight. But when one learned in May, 1967, that Mr. Carter had been convicted of murdering three white people in a bar in Paterson, New Jersey, one scarcely questioned the verdict: it simply followed that Mr. Carter was as evil as he looked. and that was the end of it.

Moreover, Mr. Carter's prison autobiography is not especially an apologia pro vita sua. His eloquence doesn't compare with that of Eldridge Cleaver in "Soul on Ice" or George Jackson in "Sole-dad Brother." When he is not employing self-conscious phrases like "the destructive forces that rage within my soul," he tends to speak the language of the street hustler, using words not so much for the logical precision of their meaning as for the cumulative effect of their sounds. Sometimes he seems to wax so selfhypnotically dramatic that it is difficult to believe the climactic points of his flourishes as, for instance, when he claims to have concluded a "dialogue" with Trenton State Prison's electric chair by actually urinating on the threatening object. (Where at that point was the warden who had relaxed prison rules by escorting Mr. Carter on this visit to the death house? one wonders.) Nor does Mr. Carter always project his character with the utmost clarity and candor. He adores his wife and child, he assures us, when it looks as though he is never going to live with them again and he is trying to dramatize the cruelty of his prison conviction; yet his affection is not so much in evidence when it doesn't suit his purposes, as for instance when he is listing as witnesses to his activities the people who helped him get free of his wife on the night when the triple murder happened to occur. The white world was his enemy, he rages when it is rhetorically useful to his purposes; but on the other hand be had many white friends and supporters, he admits when be gets around to explaining details of his ring and prison careers. He was born to fight and destroy, he assures us while describing (in detail) the many boxing matches he won; but when it comes to those he lost, he either alibis that he was being mishandled, or doesn't bother to mention those bouts at

In other words, "The Sixteenth Round" is often the confused, angry my of a man who sometimes wanted to destroy the world, at other times wanted the world to destroy him; who explains at great length the injustices that were visited upon him, but doesn't ever analyze the injustices he visited on others; and who ends his book with the somewhat empty-sounding plea that "Now the only chance I have is in appealing directly to you, the people and showing you the wrongs that have to be righted—the injustice that has been done to me ..."as if we, "the people," could do for him what legal counsel and to do at his trial in 1967.

And yet, for all the apparent shortcomings of the man and his book, Mr. Carter makes a very strong case that he was framed for reasons of bigotry when he was convicted of that triple slaying. And not only does he make such a case in his book, but it seems to have been substantlated by a recent report in The New York Times that Mr. Carter's two principal accusers had admitted to "deliberately and wrongly identifying him and another man as the slayers. Which makes one realize, as one looks back at "The Sixteenth Round" that it doesn't much matter whether boxing fans like me took Mr. Carter's "evil" ring image to be real or not. It doesn't really count whether his book is consistent, articulate, candid, and full of insights or not. It needn't concern us how Rubin Carter compares with writers like Eldridge Cleaver and George Jackson. Images don't count. You can appear to be a bad guy and write a mediocre book and still be dead right about the evils of the system. And that makes "The Sixteenth Round' seem very eloquent after all.

Mr. Lehmann-Haupt is o book critic for The New York Times.

Possible Link Between Pill, Tumors Suggested MIAMI BEACH, Oct. 25 (AP-

DJ) .- A team of surgeons has discovered mysterious but usually benign growths on the livers of women; the only common denominator they can find among the women is that they were taking birth control pills.

Surgeons from the University of Kentucky reported-here on 11 women in whom they have discovered the rare liver growths. In six of the women the liver had hemorrhaged. Bleeding in the abdominal cavity required emergency surgery. One woman died. The women ranged in age between 22 years and 47 years and had been taking oral contraceptives from six months to nine years.

"We haven't proven the role of the oral contraceptive (in these liver tumors), but since this was the only significant medication most of these women were taking, a possibility of a link is increasing every day," Dr. E. Truman Mays, professor of surgery at the University of Kentucky, told reporters before delivering a report on the liver growths to the American College of Surgeons meeting here.

Storm owner Bob Harris said earlier in the week the club would have to consider a move if fan support did not improve. While he lauded the corps of 15,000 loyal fans the club has averaged this season, he said the team could no longer exist with crowds of that size.

The victory over the WFL's premier team was Portland's sixth against 10 losses and one tie and kept the Storm in the battle for a playoff spot. The loss snapped an 11-game winning streak for Memphis. Pete Beathard threw touchdown passes of 42 and eight yards to wide-received Jeff Baker as the Storm rolled up 13 first downs in the opening quarter.

It sounded exactly like a woman's. My first thought was that CBS's Pat Summerall had had a serious operation. Then I decided that the sound on my set had gone awry. But a few seconds later a very pretty brunette came on the screen who was introduced as Jane Chastain, and Summerall said she was going to do the color for the game of a girl?

Let us make no mistake about this. Football watching is the last refuge of the male chauvinist pig. We invented the game, we play it every Sunday-and Monday and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday and Saturday (see your local paper for TV listings). It is our thing.

As nice as Ms. Chastain looks and as knowledgeable as she tried to be, she has no more business on B TV football game than Howard Cosell has on "The Waltons."

If I were to conjecture why CBS made this decision, I would have to guess that by assigning a woman announcer to a TV football game they were trying to ettract a larger female audience. They were hoping to win over the wives or, as they are called, "widows" of the men who spend their weekends staring dumbly at their tubes.

This thinking is not the way we do things in America. The role of the wife on Sunday afternoons is to make the beds, prepare the meals, drive the children somewhere or take care of any relatives who might drop in mex-

Even if they wanted to, they don't have time to watch football It is a cruel hoax on the part of the network to try to attract them to the TV screen when it knows women have so many more important things to do.

To show you the groveling they did last Sunday, CBS had Ms. Chastain interview Billie Jean King at halftime. The last thing American men want to see during a football halftime is an interview with Billie Jean King.

Let me make myself perfectly clear. I have no objection to women being airline pilots, truck drivers, senators and even president of the United States. They're entitled.

They can be doctors, lawyers, automobile mechanics, policemen, firemen and Indian chiefs. They can own banks, be in the numbers rackets and play Little League baseball if they want to. The only place they don't belong is on a TV sportscast telling us male spectators things that they think we didn't know about football. P.S. No abusive mail concern-

Woman Behind Girl Scout Cookies and 'Kiss Me, Kate'

PARIS (DET).—Bella Spewack, who invented Girl Scout cookies and wrote " Kiss Me, Kate," breezed through Paris recently on her way home to New York after having seen yet another production of "Kate," this time in Malmb, Sweden.

"They treated it like a revue. They threw away the book," says Mrs. Spewack, who wrote the book with her husband, Sam, to Cole Porter's music and lyrics. What she liked best in Malmö was her hotel room. "They had a fixture, sort of carbuncly, that heats the room and lights what you're reading at the same time."

The only survivor of "Kate's" anthors, Mrs. Spawack is tiny and white-haired now, but still felsty and a mile-a-minute talker. She was sporting a tan beret that she had sold to herself in London's Selfridge's, the saleslady being otherwise occupied, and she carried a white plastic bag into which she would on occasion plunge to bring up such treasures as a postcard of the statue of the man who first brought the potato to Sweden, addresses of doctors including two sisters who are dentists and dermatologists, which could save a lot of time if one were doubly afflicted, and a photograph of her husband, who died in 1971.

"It isn't given to everyone to have 50 years," Mrs. Spewack says. We were too young. He came too early and I stayed too late."

On this trip Mrs. Spewack has met several new people, including: An Egyptian who offered her a Mars bar on the London-Paris flight; a Paris cop who winked; two engineers from Poland who were off to build a tanker in Norway and whose check she cashed for fear they'd starve; the Swedish lady who showed her the potato bringer's statue and whom she met while trying to buy her present beret's predecessor in Göteborg ("It seemed I had known you always and it was quite sad when all the intense life that were you vanished in the air." the Swedish lady wrote Mrs. Spewack after she'd gone); and while having tea in Shepherd's Market in London she met a man who said, A penny for your thoughts. I've been cut up in all directions. I hate surgeons, Mrs. Spewack replied. I don't blame you, said the man, producing a calling card, which listed him as a fellow of most known surgical societies, so Mrs. Spewack and he went off and had some drinks. (She drinks sherry and smokes Tom Thumbs.)

"He's moving to Costa Rica. He says because they have no army they'll have no revolution," Mrs. Spewack says. "I said you can also meet Vesco, you might even meet Nixon."

Mrs. Spewack and her husband were one of Broadway's top writing teams, most famous for "Boy Meets Girl" ("The Incky part in that one was the manicurist—all the girls who played that part married millionaires," she says). They also wrote for Hollywood ("My Favorite Wife," with Irene Dunne, was their favorite) and they wrote one Broadway drama, "Spring Song."

"When people came out of the theater in tears, I would say, don't cry, it's only a play," says Bella. The Spewacks stuck to comedy

"Kiss Me, Kate," the most divine of musicals, came of course from Shakespeare's worst play, "The Taming of the Shrew." Both Spewacks and Cole Porter hated the idea. By the time they had their first run-through in Philadelphia, Mrs. Spewack was jubilant. "It was great! I just got up and said, It's wonderful. The boys said, Shihh. Cole was angry because you shouldn't say it's wonderful before

It was wonderful, of course, and in 26 years it has been seen from Japan to Argentina. Mrs. Spewack especially admired the Viennese production, where management used real silks and velvets and hiked ticket prices. The favorite song everywhere is "Brush Up Your Shakespeare." Trieste was socko and the Harvard production so innovative that Mrs. Spewack fell all about laughing:

"I told the conductor he was wonderful and had a great future. He said, I don't want to be a conductor, I want to be a doctor. I dropped him at once." Mrs. Spewack hated Peter Coe's London production: "In London suyone whose name is Peter can direct." France, to its disgrace, is almost the only country where "Kate" has never been seen. "I had a whole megillah with Louise de Vilmorin," she said. "Then I met Jean-Louis Barrault. We met with Madeleine and I said, why don't you do 'Kate'? She said there's no part for me. In France everyone shakes hands and nothing happens."

Mrs. Spewack is writing a book called "Travels with Kate Including Scandinavia." She turned down an offer to write about her stormy marriage but a publisher who bought her an expensive lunch-"that shows they're serious" -has persuaded her to write something called Why I Write Comedy."

"It's the story of my childhood," said Mrs. Spewack. "You'll CIT YOUR EYES OUT.

"I wrote under five names. One was Bella Cohen, the name my mother gave me. There was no father. As B book reviewer, I was Bellacy; I thought that sounded good. Paul Poiret wanted me to go back to Paris with him. Me, the worst dressed woman in New York and still the worst dressed woman in the world."

She turned down a chance to edit a woman's page-"I resented t, women can read the whole paper"—and became a press agent ince newspaperwomen were so badly paid. It was at this point that she invented Girl Scout cookies. Before that, she had waited on table, taught English to foreigners and tutored girls in Latin.
"I was lucky," she says. "It's been a good life. It could have een better. As a waitress I was no good." She met Sam Spewack at a Socialist rally, Judy Holliday's father introduced them. "Sem was 19. He was all in black-I didn't know they were his father's clothes. Black suit, black umbrells, black hat. I thought he was a detective. I hated him on sight."

Before "Kate," the Spewacks had collaborated with Cole Porter

"Leave It to Me" (1938), in which Mary Martin sang "My Heart Belongs to Daddy." It was written for the Gaxton-Moore comedy team at the urging of Billy Gaxton, who was on an ocean liner with the Spewacks and his stately blonds wife, Madeleine Cameron.

It was in the days when France still had ships. Billy Gaxton told me his wife was the first in the Ziegield Follies to walk across the stage carrying a handbag. I mulled that over. He said, what about a musical? Sam reacted as if he couldn't hear. I said, we'll pick

On the same crossing was Edna Ferber, who accused Mrs. Spewack of chesting at shuffleboard some years later when they met walking around New York's reservoir, and a man who was so seared he'd been cited in the notorious Mary Aster diaries that he cut his face open dashing to be the first to get the newspapers that were dropped on board. "He had a termine gash and he wasn't even mentioned," she says. "Those were the happy days. The market was up and everyone was young."

Once back in New York Mrs. Spewack will check on a Broadway revival of "Kate" and get some more herets at Lamston's, where they cost only half as much as at Selfridge's. "This is the only one I have," she said, pulling at it flercely, "and no one's getting it.". A pause. "Do you want it?" she said.

Why Rachel Fitler. Will Marry 29-Year-

Gokey claims that the Rachel Fitler, the 77 (or 61, close friends and that t Happy Hockefeller, says she is time on his yacht at For marrying Michael Wilson, 29, son dale. of a Weish coal miner, because she is tired of being lonely. "I guess it would have been better if he had been older." Miss Fitier told the Philadelphia Inquirer. "The ideal age would have been someone who is 60 or 65. He would be more experienced and settled in his career and Comedian Jack Codors of Lebenon In would be about to retire," she said referring to Wilson's apparent ambitions to become an industrial architect. She inherited about $5 million from the family rope manufacturing empire. Why did she wait so long to get mar-ried: "I wasn't really interested before. I didn't want to have that after numerous anything wrong with children and I liked being by
